

Culture in the Box

Our partner school in India invited us to participate in an engaging initiative organised by the British Council known as "Culture in the Box." This innovative project aimed to foster intercultural understanding and appreciation among students from different nations. As part of this initiative, the students from India produced a creative and informative short video showcasing ten carefully selected items that each symbolise significant aspects of their vibrant culture, including traditional clothing, culinary specialities, and festive artefacts. Following this, the enthusiastic Year 6 students from Woodside dedicated their time and effort to create their own "British Culture in the Box" video, aimed at sharing the rich elements of British heritage, such as iconic landmarks, traditional sports, and popular cuisine, with their friends in India. In order to facilitate a deeper exchange of ideas and insights, we organised a video call between the two schools to discuss our respective videos and the valuable lessons we had learned from one another's presentations. While the children absorbed substantial knowledge during this interactive discussion, they also formulated numerous intriguing questions that could not be answered in the limited time available during the call. Consequently, we made the decision to extend the project further by preparing an additional presentation that focused specifically on the diverse animals found in our respective countries and their rights, thereby promoting awareness of global biodiversity and animal welfare

INDIAN CULTURE IN THE BOX

Culture in a box-UK

Cup of tea
a English
drink what nearly everyone
drink in the morning.

Cup of tea

Fish and chips
UK'S one of the most popular meals.

Fish and chips

